

Raglan Road

w. Irish poet Patrick Kavanagh 1946

m. traditional song "The Dawning of the Day" (Fáinne Geal an Lae)]

Verse 1:

On [G] Raglan Road on an [Bm] autumn [C] day
I [Em] saw her [D] first and [G] knew That [C] her dark hair would [Bm] weave a [Em] snare that [G] I might [Bm] one day [Am] rue [D]
I [C] saw the danger [Bm] yet I [Em] passed a [G] long the [Em] enchanted [Am] way [D]
And I [G] said "Let grief be a [Bm] falling [C] leaf
At the [Em] dawning [D] of the [G] day".

Verse 2:

On [G] Grafton Street in [Bm] Novem[C]ber
we tripped [Em] lightly a [D] long the [G] ledge
Of a [C] deep ravine where [Bm] can be [Em] seen the [G] worth of [Em] passion's [Am] pledge [D]
The [C] Queen of Hearts still [Bm] making [Em] tarts, and [G] I'm not [Em] making [Am] hay [D] Oh I [G] loved too much and by [Bm] such, by [C] such is [Em] happiness [D] thrown a [G] way.

Verse 3:

I [G] gave her gifts [Bm] of the [C] mind
I [Em] gave her the [D] secret [G] sign That's [C] known to the [Bm] artists [Em] who have [G] known the true [Em] gods of sound and [Am] stone [D]
And [C] word and tint and [Bm] without [Em] stint,
I [G] gave her poems to [Am] say [D]
With her [G] own name there and [Bm] own her dark [C] hair Like the [Em] clouds over [D] fields of [G] May.

Verse 4:

On a [G]quiet street where [Bm]old ghosts [C]meet
I [Em]see her [D]walking [G]now
A [C]way from me so [Bm]hurried[Em]ly
my [G]reason [Em]must [Am]allow [D] That [C]I have loved [Bm]not as I [Em]should a [G]creature [Em]made of [Am]clay [D] when the [G]angel woos the [Bm]clay he'll [C]lose his [Em]wings at the [D]dawn of [G]day.
